

I love XM Radio. It provides me with a service that is critical for my commute. I live in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia, but work in Gaithersburg, Md. I rely on XM's traffic reports for the Washington, D.C. region to get to work on time. The traffic report gives me instant information about Interstate 270 so I know whether to take the "back way" or the highway. The broadcast stations play sooooo many minutes of commercials that I cannot rely upon them for news and weather (with the exception of WTOP AM. However, it's signal is not easy to pick up where I live.). XM provides me with entertaining programming for the drive, from old time radio plays to music without constant commercial interruption. I pay for XM because it is worth it. I stopped listening to commercial broadcast stations because they care more for their advertisers than their listeners.
